

MISS ANNA T. MOUNTJOY.

The Lexington (Mo.) News Pays a Loving Tribute to the Deceased.

Speaking of the death of Miss Anna Thomas Mountjoy, youngest child of Mrs. Anna E. Mountjoy, formerly of Bernard, but now of Cincinnati, the Lexington (Mo.) News says: "The announcement brought sadness and deep regret that one so young, so bright and altogether lovable had been called upon to pay the last debt of nature. For five weeks she had been battling with disease and the hopes of the untiring watchers—mother, sister and trained nurse—fluctuated; now encouraged, again depressed—ending in the reaper cutting off the sweet life and taking His tired child home. To make her death sadder, if possible, was the fact that this was her first real sickness. She was so full of health, and strength that the loving mother had never thought of death in connection with her.

"For two years she made her home in Lexington attending the Baptist College, winning for herself a place in the affections of a large circle of friends which distance and absence has not obliterated. She was an unusually pure-minded girl, of unusual force of character, amiable, modest, possessing all those endearing traits of character which belong to but few. She was well-beloved by those who knew her best, and just as life seemed stretching out before her brightest, our Father called her home. The fragrance of her sweet life will ever linger with those who knew and loved her best. Asleep on her Savior's bosom, her race of life is run, the victor's palms and crown are hers, for the battle and strife is done. A little over ten months ago a loved cousin, almost like a sister, preceded her to that heavenly home, and our Faith enables us to believe that she was 'waiting and watching at that beautiful gate' to welcome the loved one home to enjoy with her the eternal beauties of Paradise.

"She was interred beside her father in the beautiful 'city of the dead' at Maysville, Ky.

"There comes a voice: 'I need them in my kingdom; Grieve not! ye know that 'blessed are the dead.' He does not give the jewels from this kingdom. He only sends them to us as a loan; And when He thinks they need His blessed protection. He calleth back to paradise His own."

Pleasantly Entertained.

Hand in hand with the ice and snow of bleak old February came one of the most enjoyable events of the winter. Mr. Charles Rhodes and his sister, Miss Anna, delightfully entertained the Washington Cooking Club on Friday evening, February 1st. The gentlemen, with fingers weary and worn, sat playing their needle and thread on aprons of yellow, white and red till their heads began to swim and eyes grew heavy and dim, but by and by came sweet relief, and with it delicious refreshments, served at midnight, when silence like a gentle spirit was brooding o'er the outside world. The remainder of the evening was pleasantly spent with cards, and many engaged in tripping the light fantastic toe till the wee sma' hours, whispering in echoes "no sleep till morn when youth and pleasure meet, to chase the glowing hours with flying feet."

Among the happy ones that graced this merry crowd were seen Misses Anna and Mary Rhodes, Cornelia Downing, Lena Alexander, Mayme Key, Margaret Allison, Lucy Durrett, Kath. ### WINCHESTER WINS.

The Famous Fight Over the Kentucky Wesleyan College at Last Settled.

The famous legal contest over the Kentucky Wesleyan College has at last been settled and Millersburg loses.

An Associated Press dispatch from Washington, D. C., says: "The suit of George W. Bryan et al., trustees, &c., vs. the Board of Education of the Kentucky Conference of the Methodist Church, South, was decided in the Supreme Court Monday. Some years ago subscriptions were made to a fund for the establishment of an educational institution at Millersburg, to be under the control of the Kentucky Annual Conference of the M. E. Church, South. Later the Board of Education of the Conference ordered its removal to Winchester.

"Bryan and his associates brought suit to retain the institute at Millersburg, on the ground that the contributions were made under a contract that it would not be moved. The Kentucky Court of Appeals decided that no such contract existed, and Justice Harlan stated that the Supreme Court of the United States was satisfied that the judgment of the Court of Appeals was correct, and should, therefore, be affirmed; and it was so ordered."

A MARVELOUS ESCAPE.

A C. and O. Brakeman's Thrilling Experience at Indian Run Last Saturday.

A brakeman on the C. and O.'s local freight between this city and Russell had a marvelous escape last Saturday three miles west of South Portsmouth. The Portsmouth Blade gives the particulars of his thrilling experience. It says: "The train had gone in on the siding of the Kentucky Fire Brick Co. at that place to shift some cars of clay. The company have a side-track running from the main line to their works on the west side of Indian Run, and also a track leading across the Run, over a trestle, to the clay banks on the east side of the valley. The engine had been sent over for some cars of clay that were on the east side. The cars were coupled on and the train started back to the west side. As the engine neared the west end of the trestle the engineer saw that the switch had been left open in such a manner as to derail the engine and probably plunge the whole train into the creek below. He put on the air with a jerk and reversed the engine.

The sudden stop threw the brakeman, who was standing on top of the cars, heels over head between them. He fell flat on his back across the rail but a few feet away from the wheels. As the headway of the slowly moving train was almost instantly overcome, reversing the engine started it to moving backward. The brakeman lay for an instant stunned by the heavy fall, and the wheels were almost touching him before he roused sufficiently to realize his peril. He made a sudden desperate spring, turned a neat back summersault and fell headlong to the bed of the stream below.

"Those who were eye-witnesses of the affair, and had held their breath in horror at the spectacle, felt certain that he had escaped death in one form only to meet it in another, and rushed down the banks of the stream expecting to find his mangled and lifeless body. Strange to say he escaped with very little injury, a sprained wrist being the most serious hurt he received. He was an inexperienced man, and his wonderful escape will do much to teach him caution. He could not do the same thing again once in a thousand times and escape death."
